THE South-Carolina GAZETTE.

April 13, 1752. [NUMB. 933.]

NAPLES, Dec. 10. Pursuant to the measures which have lately been concerted in regard to the administration of our ecclesiastical affairs, it has been resolved, that for the time to come, no layman, without an express licence from his majesty, shall be cited to Rome in regard to any affairs belonging to our spiritual court.

The convents called Collaterani, which his majesty thought proper lately to suppress, were of the benedictine order, and were in possession of very great revenues, which his majesty is determined shall be appropriated to the maintenance and support of the general hospital, lately erected in this city.

Madrid, Dec. 13. O. S. It having been represented to the king, that the city of Hamburgh was very sorry to have incurred his displeasure by its treaty with the Algerines, and desired nothing so earnestly as to be reinstated in his majesty's favour; that her magistrates are ready to comply with what the king shall please to prescribe, and desire permission to send hither one of their Syndics, to assure his majesty of their profound respect; the king has consented to admit that deputy, and ordered passports to be sent him. As to the success of his commission, it is impossible to say any thing positive, because the ministry don't explain themselves on this head, and on the other hand the decree against the commerce of the Hamburghers is still rigorously executed. It is certain, that the trade carried on with the Danes was in a fair way of being interdicted, on account of their treaty relating to Saffia and Santa Croce, had we not been unexpectedly informed of their miscarriage in that affair.

The masters of several small vessels lately arrived from the Ocean assure us, that several cortairs of Barbary are cruising near the Streights, to intercept some of the Spanish registerships which are expected at Cadiz from the West Indies.

Copenhagen, Dec. 17. O. S. His majesty has issued a proclamation, in which, after notifying to his subjects the manner in which it has pleased the almighty to deprive him of the best of wives, and them of the best of queens, it is enjoined, that the bells shall be tolled from ten to eleven, and from five to six every day till the funeral; that all persons shall put themselves in deep mourning, those only excepted whose circumstances will not bear it.

Every one has access, at the tolling hours, to pay their last homage to the deceased queen. The corpse, in a robe of silver stuff with a Spanish point, and a royal mantle, lies on a bed of state in an alcove, with six steps covered with a black velvet, round the bed are sixteen stands, and in each six white wax lights; and on the right hand of it lies the royal infant in a black velvet coffin.

Hague, Jan. 6. We hear that the states of Holland and West Friezeland meet to-morrow, to consult of proper measures for burying the late stadtholder, and we do not doubt but the day for that melancholy ceremony will soon be fixed.

The project for opening a Free Port is actually approv'd, but will not be made publick till after the funeral of the late prince stadtholder, when her royal highness the princess governante will be at liberty to take her seat in, and propose it to the states of the province of Holland.

Extract of a Letter from Bourdeaux, dated 15th Jan. 1752.

'The account we received from St. Domingo of the damage done to our plantations by the late hurricane, are 'every day more diſmal; the effects of it hath been general 'all over the Iſland, and the indico plant, though very low, 'hath ſuffered greatly, which added to the other misfortunes 'it hath already ſuſtained, makes the crop of that commodity 'more ſcanty than can be imagined; and it is computed, 'that the whole quantity made at this time does not exceed 'a quarter part of what uſed to be made. They had ſeveral 'ſhips a loading for this and other ports, but ſo few goods 'that they muſt be detained much longer than uſual, which 'is the reaſon that none have lately arrived, though generally 'expected at this time, and when they come, I apprehend 'the quantity of goods will be very unequal to the demand 'which uſed to be very briſk in the ſpring, ſo that upon the 'whole the price of our American products muſt keep riſing 'ſome time longer.
